Prosperous com unities have been almost disheart ened by these unexpected calamitie and a wide range of territory has been swept of its products by tempest and hail. These rapidly multiplyiz evils were considered "sufficient unto the day," and a strong hope has been felt everywhere that further loss rom the season's peculiarities migh e avoided in the juture. But the in formation of another scourge, which may ultimately prove greater than its sciecessors, comes in such shape at its existence can no longer be doubted. The ravenous swarms of the great Western deserts have taken wing, and are now blasting ver tation from the Minnesots river to the British possessions. The state ment has been received from reliable authority that the southern wing of this devouring army has already cre ated consternation and inflicted losses upon the tarmers of Renville county bracing some of the finest tracts of farming lands in the State. Leaving Renville, no reliable intelligence their appearance has been received from points below Alexandria, but in that vicinity the avant-couriers of the swarming millions have appeared and are robbing the fields of their wealth. The damage thus far inflicted in that section has been slight, but fears are entertained that they are simply the forerunners of greater destruction to come. One hopeful feature in the accounts of their ray ages is, that they are generally moving in a northerly direction, and may possibly, and probably will, avoid the more thickly populated regions in the interior and eastern portion of the
